Experimental, artistic and practical approaches to radical politics.

Perfect for art shops, museum galleries and / or well-curated bookshops, these beautiful, affordable and unusually packaged calls to action really stand out on the bookshelves.

Created by avant-garde writers, the series is aimed at students of politics and art who are sick of dry textbooks and orthodox curricula, and artist-activists looking for inspiration in their work. Longer than a pamphlet and shorter than a book, they are perfect impulse-buys for a young, radical reader browsing books on current issues such as race, feminism and the environment.

In many places around the world, the freedom to simply care for one another is under attack by the powerful, and acts of solidarity are being made illegal. In a moment of struggle defined by the rollback of social welfare programs, the criminalisation of migration, and the right-wing clampdown on bodily autonomy, radical networks of care are fighting back.

Against atomised despair, Pirate Care shows that fighting back isn't only about legal and legislative changes but also about organizing, direct action, and disobedient care.

DECOLONIZING
MONEY

Julio Linares

October 2024

£14.99

To change the world, we need a money revolution. Yet the debate over money has been dominated by two perspectives: those free-market capitalists who want money to rule everything, and those who want the state to harness money's power. Decolonizing Money presents an anarchist theory of money which sets out strategies for collective liberation beyond state and capital.

This innovative book takes up lessons from global history and social movements in order to unleash the political imagination. It shows us how the creation, use and most importantly the destruction of money are forms of power that need to be reclaimed through direct action, as part of a radical democratic project for autonomy and self-determination.
